Chapter 1 by Kage Oshi

A gaming enthusiast that spends his life inside a virtual reality game winds up inside the fantasy world of Entheria for good. He stays at the last moment savouring the last moments in the world he had spent most of his adolescent life in, reminiscing about his triumphs and defeats and when it was finally time to give up his world; and his friends for some reason he can't return to reality. As this comes to a surprise to him his first action was to notify the admins surely they would know what's going on, but there was no reply none of the special items given from the admins was of any use at all now that he was trapped in a world he spent so much time in. Now not living a double life any longer he must come and shroud the world in an ancient name forsaken by men and beast alike the name of the Fallen and let them all cower in fear for when they hear this name they will shiver in fear... for real this time.

Chapter 2 by Vonclank

After finishing up a rather long play session with my friends, and beating the final dungeon, and obtaining the Ultra Rare Item "The Kings Crown" an item that only has a drop chance of 0.01%. I was exhausted and ready to get off and have some food and hope back on after I had some fuel in my system. I opened up the menu and hit "Exit Game", nothing seemed to happen so I hit it again, I thought it must be some glitch, so I tried it for a third time and still no response. I got a bit worried that the servers weren't working properly and that my progress wouldn't be saved. I then called for a game master to ask the about the server status, nobody answered, I thought that was odd, since there are always at least one game master on but not this time. I thought maybe since I gave it a bit of time, that now the "exit game" button would work but nothing to go check the Treasure room to make sure that the "Kings Crown" was still there. As I entered the room shining in a golden aura, the crown was still there, I reached over and grabbed the crown just because I didn't want to lose it. As I picked up the crown I something felt different, I walked back into the main chambers of the guild hall and both of my friends had disappeared. A very basic then appeared that read "You are now, a permanent resident of Entheria, enjoy your stay". Was I trapped in this world alone?
